Case Reference Sheet

The scope of congressional investigative authority and what constitutes a “legitimate legislative purpose”

- Trump v. Mazars LLP, Trump v. Deutsche Bank AG (+Appeal), Committee on Ways & Means v. Treasury

The executive’s authority to assert executive privilege or absolute immunity in response to congressional subpoenas

- Committee on the Judiciary v. McGahn, Kupperman v. House of Representatives, Committee on Oversight and Reform v. Barr & Ross

Congressional standing to sue for enforcement of subpoenas or other purposes

- Committee on the Judiciary v. McGahn, Committee on Ways & Means v. Treasury, Blumenthal v. Trump, Committee on Oversight and Reform v. Barr

Judicial authority to interfere with congressional subpoenas

Miscellaneous

- In re Application of the Committee on the Judiciary (authority of Congress to obtain grand jury materials for impeachment proceedings)
- Trump v. Vance (whether President is immune from any criminal investigation while in office)
- Emoluments cases (District of Columbia v. Trump, CREW v. Trump, Blumenthal v. Trump)
Meet the Experts

Michael Stern (@mls1776) is an attorney specializing in legal issues affecting Congress and the legislative process, including congressional ethics, elections, investigations, lobbying and constitutional reform. He served as Senior Counsel to the U.S. House of Representatives from 1996 to 2004. He later served as Deputy Staff Director for Investigations for the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs and Special Counsel to the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He has co-chaired the D.C. Bar's Administrative Law and Agency Practice Section and served on the ABA Task Force on Lobbying Reform. He blogs about congressional legal issues at Point of Order, and is a graduate of Haverford College and the University of Chicago Law School.

Stephen Vladeck (@steve_vladeck) is a professor at the University of Texas School of Law. His teaching and research focus on federal jurisdiction, constitutional law, national security law, and military justice. He also fills a host of additional roles, including but not limited to, CNN’s Supreme Court analyst, co-host of the “National Security Law Podcast,” a senior editor of the peer-reviewed Journal of National Security Law and Policy, co-editor-in-chief of the Just Security blog, a senior contributor to the Lawfare blog, and the Supreme Court Fellow at The Constitution Project at POGO. Vladeck is a graduate of Yale Law School and has a B.A. in History and Mathematics from Amherst College. He has argued before the U.S. Supreme Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces and is a co-author of Aspen Publishers’ leading national security law and counterterrorism law casebooks.